Name of the Course Co-ordinator Dr. Mini K D

Earthworms are acknowledged as the friends of farmers, are the intestines of earth. Using worms to convert biowaste into nutrient-rich fertilizer is simple, inexpensive, energy efficient, and a great way to teach students to become life-long recyclers. As a process for handling organic residuals, it represents an alternative approach in waste management. In this sense, vermicomposting is compatible with sound environmental principles that value conservation of resources and sustainable practices. The certificate course in Vermicomposting proposed by Dept. of Zoology was approved by UGC, complying with NSQF (Level 4).

Aim & Objectives of the Course

- Students will be able to compost even in a limited space
- To acquire knowledge of composting
